Faith Matters Survey

The 2006 Faith Matters (FM) Survey provides the bulk of the data in American Grace. FM2006 is an original source of data which we designed, implemented, and analyzed. The FM survey was generously funded by the John Templeton Foundation. We stress, however, that the Templeton Foundation has played no role in the analysis or interpretation of the data.

We began the process of designing Faith Matters in July of 2005 by holding a one-day meeting at Harvard with a group of experts on religion, survey research, or both. Our group included Christopher Achen (Princeton University), Willam Galston (Brookings Institution), John C. Green (University of Akron/Pew Forum on Religion and Public Life), Anna Greenberg (Quinlan Rosner Research), Fredrick Harris (Columbia University), Ralph Hood (University of Tennessee, Chattanooga), Jon Krosnick (Stanford University), Martin Marty (University of Chicago), Robert Sampson (Harvard University), Rev. Timothy Scully, C.S.C. (University of Notre Dame), Christian Smith (University of Notre Dame), and Christopher Winship (Harvard University). These experts offered a wealth of advice, for which we are most grateful. However, while we attempted to take all of their advice, we alone are responsible for any shortcomings in the survey.

Following that meeting, our research team began writing survey questions, often by drawing on existing data sources. Wherever possible, therefore, FM has replicated questions asked in other surveys, enabling us to validate our findings with different sources of data. We were pleased to find that whenever we have cross-checked results from Faith Matters with other national surveys (e.g., Pew or GSS or NES), we found that our results largely conform to those of other data sources.

The 2006 Faith Matters survey was administered in the summer of 2006 by International Communications Research. It has a total of 3,108 respondents, all age eighteen or older. Interviews were conducted in both English and Spanish. To ensure the accuracy of our Spanish translation, we had it backward-translated into English again. Respondents were offered $25 for completing the survey which, on average, took between forty-five minutes and an hour to complete.

When asked if they would like to participate in the survey, respondents were not told that it was a study about religion. Instead, interviewers introduced themselves and said that the survey was being conducted on behalf of researchers at Harvard and Notre Dame, and that it was “on some current events.”

Margin of Error

The margin of error for total respondents is +/-1.73 at the 95% confidence level.

Sample Design

A random-digit dial (RDD) sample was used in this study to achieve a national cross-section of respondents. This sample was first dialed to remove as many non-residence numbers as possible.

Field Period

The field period for this study was June 29, 2006 – August 29, 2006. The interviewing was conducted by ICR/International Communications Research in Media, PA. All interviews were conducted using the Computer Assisted Telephone Interviewing (CATI) system. The CATI system ensured that questions followed logical skip patterns and that the listed attributes automatically rotated, eliminating “question position” bias.

Weighting and Estimation

The data was weighted by gender, age, race, region, and education. QBal, an industry-standard weighting program that employs a raking procedure to simultaneously equate weights by each variable, was used to create the final weights. Counts for the weights were obtained through the 2005 U.S. Census Current Population Survey, March Supplement.

Survey Instrument

The Survey for the FM 2006 can be found here:

<http://americangrace.org/RESEARCH/FM2006%20FINAL.pdf>

Response Rate

The response rate for the survey, calculated according to the criteria established by the American Association for Public Opinion Research, is 53 percent.¹ (For those readers unfamiliar with survey research, that response rate is quite good for a telephone survey). The data have been weighted by gender, age, race, region, and education according to the March supplement of the 2005 Current Population Survey. The weighting is merely precautionary, however, as it has very little effect on the results. The overall response rate is calculated as follows:

¹ This is according to AAPOR's RR3 formula.
